

1970 CENSUS

The U.S. population abroad reported in the 1970 census was 1,737,836. As of April 1, 1970, this figure comprised—

- land-based U.S. military personnel stationed abroad and their dependents living with them.
- crews of U.S. Navy vessels deployed to the 6th or 7th Fleets.
- Federal civilian employees stationed abroad and their dependents living with them.
- crews of vessels in the U.S. merchant marine at sea with a foreign port as their destination or docked in a foreign port.
- private U.S. citizens living abroad for an extended period and their dependents living with them.<sup>8</sup>

Both administrative records and direct enumeration were used to obtain counts of Americans overseas in 1970. Data for the Army, Air Force, and Marine Corps personnel stationed abroad were provided by the Department of Defense (DOD) from its administrative records, rather than by direct enumeration on census forms. Enumeration of Navy personnel and all other Americans abroad or at sea was conducted by means of specially designed census report forms, with the cooperative efforts of the DOD, Department of State, Coast Guard, and Maritime Administration. These agencies took responsibility for the publicity of the census as well as for the distribution and collection of the forms. In addition, heightened efforts were made to obtain reports for private U.S. citizens living abroad for an extended period.

For the 1970 census, "living abroad" was defined as residing outside the 50 States, the District of Columbia, or a U.S. commonwealth or territory (the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, American Samoa, Canal Zone, Guam, U.S. Virgin Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands). For purposes of calculating the apportionment, however, the overseas population was augmented by the inclusion of members of the Armed Forces, Federal civilian employees, and their dependents who were living in a U.S. commonwealth or territory and reported a home State.

As in 1960, a separate report was issued on Americans Living Abroad, PC(2)-10A, which provided social and economic characteristics of the civilian population abroad.

The Apportionment Population for 1970

In 1970, officially for the first time, certain segments of the overseas population were allocated to their home State and were included in the population of those States for apportionment of seats in the U.S. House of Representatives. In all previous censuses, the apportionment population consisted solely of the resident population of the 50 States (excluding the population of the District of Columbia) and did not include the overseas population. The two major reasons for the change in the procedure were the larger number of persons (both military and civilian) overseas in 1970 and the congressional support reflected in the recommendation of the House Subcommittee on Census and Statistics to include these persons.

<sup>8</sup>The enumeration of these persons was done on a voluntary basis, and this group was not so well reported as other overseas groups covered by the census.

The overseas military and Federal civilian population assigned to a home State, and their dependents living with them, numbered 1,580,998<sup>9</sup> on April 1, 1970. Excluding the 6,461 persons reporting a home in the District of Columbia, 1,574,537 persons were added to the resident population of the 50 States for calculating the congressional apportionment. This represented less than 1 percent (.77 percent) of the total resident population. The apportionment population based on the 1970 census is shown in table 5.

The segments of the overseas population included in the apportionment count were the following:<sup>10</sup>

- U.S. military personnel (including crews of military vessels) who were stationed in a U.S. commonwealth or territory or in a foreign country and reported a home State, and their spouses and children living with them.
- Federal civilian employees stationed in a U.S. commonwealth or territory who reported a home State, and their spouses and children living with them.
- Federal civilian employees stationed in a foreign country who were U.S. citizens or reported a home State, and their spouses and children living with them.
- Other relatives living abroad with persons in the above groups who were U.S. citizens or reported a home State.

Although these persons were added to the resident population of their respective home States for apportionment purposes, they were not distributed among the political subdivisions of the State. Thus, congressional districts within each State were drawn using resident population counts, exclusive of the overseas population. In addition, except for a few special cases, these persons were not included in the tables of 1970 census reports.

Land-Based Armed Forces, Federal Civilian Employees, and Dependents

For members of the Army, Air Force, and Marine Corps stationed overseas as of April 1, 1970, the DOD provided tabulations by State of "home of record" from its own administrative records. However, persons overseas such as dependents of these Armed Forces personnel, other <sup>9</sup>Differs from the figure of 1,737,836 by the inclusion of U.S. military personnel, Federal civilian employees, and their dependents (95,408) stationed in a U.S. commonwealth or territory and the exclusion of private U.S. citizens living abroad for an extended period (236,336) and crews (15,910) of U.S. merchant marine vessels at sea with a foreign port as their destination or in a foreign port.

<sup>10</sup>Not included were crews of U.S. merchant marine vessels at sea with a foreign port as their destination or in a foreign port.

Source: 1970 Census of Population, Volume I, Characteristics of the Population, Number of Inhabitants, United States Summary, table A.<sup>1</sup>Includes U.S. military and Federal civilian employees and their dependents who were living in (1) a U.S. commonwealth or territory and reported a home State or (2) a foreign country and were U.S. citizens or reported a home State.<sup>2</sup>Differs from the population of 203,211,926 shown in the detailed 1970 census tables because of revisions made after the tabulations were completed.<sup>3</sup>The population of the District of Columbia is not included in the apportionment population.

land-based Armed Forces personnel, Federal civilian employees, and the overseas dependents of these two groups were self-enumerated on the Overseas Census Report (Form D-23).

The DOD and Coast Guard (in the Department of Transportation) distributed and collected census reports for their land-based overseas personnel for whom counts were not provided from administrative records. Thus, land-based Navy and Coast Guard personnel, all military dependents, and DOD civilian employees and their dependents were enumerated on report forms.

The Department of State handled the enumeration of other overseas Federal employees and their dependents abroad through its embassies and other diplomatic and consular posts. Completed report forms were returned to the embassies and consulates and shipped to the Jeffersonville, IN, Census Operations Office for processing.

Dependents of Federal employees included the spouse, children, and other relatives who were living in the household of an overseas Federal employee (military or civilian) and were reported on an Overseas Census Report. Spouses and children were included regardless of citizenship or previous residence; other relatives were included if they were U.S. citizens (item 12) or reported a home State (item 10). To avoid double counting, spouses, children, or other relatives who were themselves Federal employees were excluded from the count of dependents (but were included in the count of Federal employees).

Crews of Military and Merchant Marine Vessels

These components comprised crews of U.S. Navy vessels deployed to the 6th (Atlantic) or 7th (Pacific) Fleets on April 1, 1970, and crews of U.S. merchant marine vessels at sea with a foreign port as their destination or in a foreign port on April 1, 1970. These persons were self-enumerated on the Report for Military and Maritime Personnel (Form D-21). Crews of military vessels were included in the apportionment population, but crews of merchant vessels were not. Only persons affiliated with the Federal Government were included in the apportionment population.

In the 1960 census and several previous censuses, only those Navy vessels berthed in a U.S. port on April 1 were counted in the resident population of the United States. Vessels in transit from one port to another or in a foreign port were classified as "at sea," and the crews were counted in the overseas population. This procedure created some assignment difficulties with regard to naval vessels on brief training cruises or those in transit between one U.S. port and another.

In view of these ambiguities, the Census Bureau decided in 1970 to assign Navy vessels on foreign assignment ("deployed") to the overseas population and remaining vessels to their "home port" as designated by the Navy Department. It was believed this procedure would more likely count naval crews in the jurisdictions in which they had dependents, owned property, and maintained other community ties.

Supplies of the Report for Military and Maritime Personnel were shipped to the captains of Navy and Coast Guard vessels in port or at sea, with the cooperation of the DOD and Coast Guard. Report forms for merchant marine vessels were shipped to the masters of these vessels through shipowner/operators, with the cooperation of the Maritime Administration. Forms were distributed by ship captains or masters to the crews of their vessels on April 1, 1970. Completed forms were collected and shipped directly to the Jeffersonville, IN, Census Operations Office.

Assigning Home State

Several methods were used to assign home State for those segments of the 1970 overseas population included in the apportionment population:

- For overseas Army, Air Force, and Marine Corps personnel, DOD assigned home State on the basis of their "home of record" from DOD personnel files.
- For overseas dependents of above Armed Forces personnel, other overseas land-based Armed Forces personnel, Federal civilian employees, and the overseas dependents of the latter two groups, the Census Bureau assigned home State from responses to item 10 on the 1970 Overseas Census Report (Form D-23).
- For crews of deployed U.S. naval vessels, the Census Bureau assigned home State from responses to item 2 on the 1970 Report for Military and Maritime Personnel (Form D-21).

Questions 2 and 10 asked for "home State" and instructed the respondents to write in their "State of voting residence, legal residence, or home of record, etc."

Private U.S. Citizens

This component of the American population abroad consisted of U.S. citizens living abroad for an extended period and not affiliated with the Federal Government who obtained and filled out an Overseas Census Report (Form D-23). Included in this group were private business persons, contract workers on military installations, employees of foreign governments and international organizations, retired persons, missionaries and religious workers, students, teachers, expatriates, and their family members (some of whom may not have been U.S. citizens).

Although this component was included in the published 1970 census overseas population figure (1,737,836), it was not included in the apportionment population. Only persons affiliated with the Federal Government were included in the apportionment population.

The State Department coordinated the enumeration of these persons through its embassies and consular offices. These offices made forms available for Americans living in their service areas to pick up, received the completed forms, and returned them to the Census Bureau for processing.

The Census Bureau launched an intensive effort in 1970 to publicize the enumeration of this civilian population overseas. It contacted such groups as the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, religious institutions with missionaries abroad, newspapers and other media with foreign bureaus, businesses and corporations with overseas field offices, and universities with overseas branches and study abroad programs and requested that they notify their U.S. personnel abroad of the census undertaking and encourage their participation. A special flyer (70-82-2) was circulated overseas and displayed in places where it would receive maximum exposure (office bulletin boards, American clubs, English language movie theaters, etc.) to announce the 1970 census enumeration of U.S. citizens abroad.

For several reasons, the count of private U.S. citizens living abroad was not complete. Many Americans abroad, especially those living in remote areas, may not have been aware that a census was being taken or, if aware, may not have been able to get to a U.S. embassy or consulate to obtain an Overseas Census Report. In addition, this category included persons legally having dual citizenship—a combination of U.S. and second-nation citizenship—who might have been uncertain or ambivalent about being included in the U.S. census. Still others may have elected not to participate, as the census for these persons necessarily had to be done on a voluntary basis. Embassy and consulate lists of Americans living in their jurisdictions generally were outdated and incomplete, since there was no requirement that U.S. citizens register with them upon entering or leaving the country. Thus, these offices had no way of distributing census reports except when Americans came there voluntarily to obtain a form. There also was wide variation among U.S. embassies in the levels of commitment and effort devoted to obtaining an accurate count. Some ran elaborate ads, mailed census reports, along with franked return envelopes, to persons registered with them, and so forth, while others did virtually nothing. Also, involvement of the embassies was voluntary, with no funding support from either the State Department or the Census Bureau. More than likely, the understatement differed substantially from one geographic area to another and from one type of private American citizen living abroad to another.

A post-1970 census comparison of data from the 1970 overseas census with country of birth/citizenship data from individual foreign censuses indicated that the census counts for private U.S. citizens represented a substantial undercount, particularly in Canada and Mexico, where the underenumeration probably exceeded 90 percent.

1980 CENSUS

The U.S. population abroad reported in the 1980 census was 995,546. As of April 1, 1980, this figure comprised—

- land-based U.S. military personnel stationed abroad and their dependents living with them.
- crews of U.S. Navy vessels deployed to the 6th or 7th Fleets.
- Federal civilian employees stationed abroad and their dependents living with them.

Thus, the overseas population in 1980 was restricted to those Americans affiliated with the Federal Government and their dependents living abroad with them. It did not include private U.S. citizens abroad for an extended period or crews of U.S. merchant marine vessels outside American waters, as was true for both the 1960 and 1970 censuses. Also unlike 1970, no component of Americans overseas was included in the apportionment population for 1980.

Information on the federally-affiliated population overseas was obtained from administrative records rather than by direct enumeration. The Department of Defense (DOD) provided counts of its military and civilian employees stationed abroad and their dependents living with them. The Office of Personnel Management and Department of State provided counts for all other overseas Federal employees and their dependents abroad. No provision was made in 1980 for the enumeration of any component of the overseas population on census report forms, as had been done in censuses since 1950.

The modifications to recent past enumeration procedures were made for the following reasons: The number of Americans overseas who were affiliated with the Federal Government was smaller than in 1970; the data were readily available from administrative records for the major population groups overseas; there was no legal requirement for the direct enumeration of Americans overseas or for including Americans overseas in the apportionment population; and the 1960 and 1970 census experience had shown that the count of Americans living overseas who were not affiliated with the Federal Government could not be obtained in a complete manner, nor could this group be readily defined.

Crew members of U.S. merchant marine vessels outside U.S. territorial waters on April 1, 1980, were not enumerated or otherwise counted in the 1980 census. Masters of such vessels completed a location report (D-3091) but, if outside territorial waters, crew members were not required to complete a Shipboard Census Report (Form D-23), the individual enumeration form for crews of vessels in the 1980 census.

Residence Rules

Entries relating to the overseas population in the table of residence rules contained in the 1980 Questionnaire Reference Book for stateside enumeration were the following:

OFFICE OF THE DIRECTOR

FROM THE DIRECTOR
BUREAU OF THE CENSUS

Attention: Ship's Master — The Bureau of the Census, in a cooperative effort with the Maritime Administration, the Coast Guard, and your ship operator, requests your assistance in conducting the 1980 Census of Population by obtaining an enumeration as of April 1, 1980, of all officers and crew members aboard your vessel on that date.

The questionnaires to be used ("Shipboard Census Report," Form D-23) and envelopes for returning the completed forms are being transmitted to you through your ship operator.

On April 1, 1980:

1. Complete the location report for your vessel which is printed on the back of this letter.
2. Distribute the Shipboard Census Reports (Form D-23) to each officer (including yourself) and crew member aboard the vessel, if your vessel is within the territorial waters of the United States on April 1, 1980.
3. Collect the completed questionnaires from officers and crew members.
4. Return the questionnaires and this letter with the location information on the back to the Bureau of the Census in the envelope or box provided. The envelope requires no postage; a franked label is enclosed for the box.

Encourage cooperation in completing the questionnaires by explaining that the information provided will be seen only by sworn census employees and be used only for statistical purposes. By law, (title 13, United States Code), census employees are subject to fine and/or imprisonment for any disclosure of an individual's answers to census questions. Only after 72 years does the information provided become available to other government agencies or the public. The same law requires individuals to answer the questions to the best of their knowledge.

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS

Vessels Outside the Territorial Waters of the United States on April 1, 1980: Crews of these vessels do not need to fill out Shipboard Census Reports. Masters of such vessels should complete the location report and return it in the enclosed envelope. Please destroy the unused Shipboard Census Reports.

Great Lakes Vessels: Crews of Great Lakes vessels which have not fit out by April 1, 1980, will not be enumerated on the ship. Masters of such vessels should indicate on the location report that the vessel had not fit out by April 1, and return the location report in the enclosed envelope. Please destroy the unused Shipboard Census Reports.

Passenger Ships: Passengers aboard such vessels should not be given the Shipboard Census Report (D-23) which the crew and officers complete. Special forms to be used by passengers will be distributed in March 1980.

Your assistance in obtaining a complete and accurate census of the United States is greatly appreciated.

Sincerely,

VINCENT P. BARABBA
